(“EFFE TV”), Gruppo Feltrinelli's media company and publisher of the pay TV channel laF (laeffe), in collaboration with Associazione DIG – Documentari Inchieste Giornalismi promote this call, addressed to the subjects identified at the paragraph 3, aimed at the development of a documentary movie on the changes of protest movements in the last 50 years. 1. PURPOSE

The aim of the call is to select and evaluate projects for the creation of a documentary-movie related and integrated to Fondazione Feltrinelli's research activities on the theme “1968-2018: What is left, what is right” (specified at paragraph 2), in order to support the writing and production of the project selected as the winner one.

The call is addressed to authors, film-makers, video journalists and reporters (having the requirements specified in paragraph 3) who investigate through the camera current social, economic, environmental and political issues, with the aim to create a documentary-movie and to distribute it in the Italian and international television market.

In order to write and pre-produce the documentary-movie, the winner project will make use of Fondazione Feltrinelli's archive documents, and rely on Fondazione Feltrinelli's international network, such as scholars, researchers, leading influencer and experts, that could be involved in order to develop original contents.

The project will also rely on the skills and network of LaF/EFFE TV for the creation, production and distribution of the documentary-movie.

2. CONCEPT: “1968-2018: What is left, what is right”

Premise: 1968-2018, the fiftieth anniversary

The fiftieth anniversary of one among the most significant protest movements in recent history, the 1968, occurs in years in which the forms of protest, due to the so-called digital revolution and to social and economic transformations that are underway, are going through deep changes.

1968's protest movements represented an element of discontinuity and transformation for societies, in terms of political cultures, way of life, collective imaginary, languages and expressive forms.

Starting from the anniversary, we want to propose a narration and a reflection on today's protest movements in order to raise questions and investigation paths of various kind: under which circumstances protest movements arise today? Which are their common features? On what level they cause relevant social changes? How do they depict themselves and how it is possible to describe them?

What is left, what is right – The documentary-movie

Genre: Society, Human interest, Arts & Culture

The year 1968 represented a year of discontinuity all over the world for many reasons, starting from the forms of political representation, both on the left and on the right of the political spectrum.

This call takes the 1968 anniversary as a starting point and as an opportunity for an audio-visual narration on the changes of protest movements, in particular the contemporary ones. These changes in the way in which people connect and engage in politics have both innovative features and characteristics inherited from the movements of the past, that it is necessary to analyse and narrate from different viewpoints.

With the help of a creative storytelling and the support of activists, researchers from leading European research centres, scholars and experts, we want to observe, investigate and tell the main characters, the stories and the phenomena that represent the change in cultures, social sciences, free time and in arts as political languages.

A travel into the forms of dissemination of political thought, made through music, theatre, cinema, photography, visual communication, literature, satire and public language. A travel that involve all ideologies along the right/left axis in Europe, and the changes that involve and modify deeply the way in which people live and relate to each other.
